§ 553 collateral estoppel constructive eviction res judicata

In re Sanford's, Inc. No. 384-01642-P7
Clackamas Town Center Assoc. v. Hartvig U.S.D.C. No. 91-65-PA

3/20/91 Judge Panner reversing in part and affirming in part
Judge Luckey

During negotiations concerning a shopping center lease, the debtor's lessor promised not rent additional space in the center to competing businesses. The lessor subsequently did lease to a competing business. The debtor abandoned the premises and filed bankruptcy. The trustee obtained a judgment against the lessor in state court. The landlord asserted its claim for unpaid rent in bankruptcy court.

The defense of res judicata was unavailable to the debtor because the parties consented to piecemeal litigation.

Nevertheless, collateral estoppel applied to bar the creditor's claim for prepetition rent for the period during which the debtor occupied the premises. The landlord's constructive eviction by renting to a competing business relieved the debtor of any duty to pay post-abandonment rent.

In dicta, the court suggested that even if the lessor had an allowed claim for the unpaid rent, the lessor could not setoff that claim against the trustee's judgment if it would be inequitable to allow setoff.

Attorneys for Trustee

PANNER, J.

Clackamas Town Center Associates (CTCA) and Donald H. Hartvig, Inc., the bankruptcy trustee for debtor Sanfords, Inc., appeal from a bankruptcy court order partially allowing CTCA's claim for unpaid rent and denying CTCA's claim for setoff.

This appeal shows why parties should try claims arising from common facts in the same proceeding. The parties managed to convert a straightforward claim into a factual and procedural mess by splitting CTCA's claim for rent from the trustee's claims for misrepresentation and breach of promise.

The issues are (1) is CTCA entitled to rent?; (2) if CTCA is entitled to rent, can CTCA set off its rent claim against the state court judgment?; and (3) is CTCA entitled to attorney's fees and interest? I conclude that CTCA is not entitled to unpaid rent or a setoff, and decline to address issues CTCA raises for the first time on appeal. I reverse the bankruptcy court in part and affirm in part.

AO 72 (Rev.8/82)

BACKGROUND

Debtor owned a chain of children's clothing stores. In January 1981, debtor signed a thirteen-year lease with CTCA to open a branch store in Clackamas Town Center Shopping Mall (Center). During the lease negotiations, debtor emphasized that it would not open a store unless it was the only children's clothing store in the Center. CTCA repeatedly promised debtor that it would not lease to any competing stores. Donald H. Hartvig, Inc. v. Clackamas Town Center Assocs., 101 Or. App. 79, 81-83, 789 P.2d 679, review denied, 310 Or. 393, 798 P.2d 672 (1990). Debtor opened its store in April 1981.

Despite its promises to debtor, CTCA "intended from the start to have two or three such stores." Id. at 84-85. In December 1981, CTCA leased space to Lads and Lassies. Id. at 83. Lads and Lassies opened its store in March 1982.

In March 1983, debtor filed an action against CTCA in Clackamas County Circuit Court for breach of promissory estoppel, negligent misrepresentation, misrepresentation, rescission, and unjust enrichment. That month, debtor abandoned the store. CTCA leased debtor's space to another tenant on October 31, 1983.

In May 1984, an involuntary bankruptcy petition was filed against debtor. In July 1984, debtor was adjudged bankrupt and the trustee was appointed. The trustee was substituted as plaintiff in the state court action.

3 - OPINION

AO 72 (Rev.8/82) CTCA filed a counterclaim for unpaid rent in the state court action. On October 16, 1984, the trustee's attorney notified CTCA that the trustee would not stipulate to relief from the automatic stay, 11 U.S.C. § 362:

As I analyze the case, relief from the stay is not in order. We have alleged rescision [sic] and breach of agreement. If we prevail on either basis, the counter-claim is immaterial. If rescision is allowed, there is no claim for rent. If breach is proved, Sanford's is excused from performance. If neither of Sanford's claims prevails, you are in the same position as if you were proving an independent claim for rent in the bankruptcy court.

It would be in the interest of all creditors to adjudicate your claim for rent in the bankruptcy court.

For both of these reasons, I think it is inappropriate to stipulate to a relief from stay. If you feel that my position is incorrect or if you have grounds of which I am unaware, please let me know so that I can reconsider this position.

Excerpt of Record (E.R.) 13-14. CTCA withdrew its counterclaim and filed a claim in the bankruptcy proceeding. It never sought relief from the automatic stay.

On May 11, 1988, the state court jury found for the trustee on the intentional misrepresentation claim, awarding damages of $24,742.40 for rent and common area maintenance charges, $52,800 for tenant improvements, $22,950 for interest on a bank loan, and $400,000 punitive damages. E.R. 36-37. The jury apparently reviewed the trustee's third amended complaint, which sought $71,010.49 for rent and common charges, $95,303.60 for tenant improvements, $49,846.63 for 4 - OPINION

AO 72 (Rev.8/82) interest, and $31,252.60 for ending inventory. E.R. 29-30. The jury found defendant not liable for breach of promise, and the trustee withdrew its claim for negligent misrepresentation, unjust enrichment, and rescission. The trial court granted CTCA's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the punitive damages award. However, the Oregon Court of Appeals ordered the verdict reinstated, and the Supreme Court denied review. Donald H. Hartvig, Inc. v.
Clackamas Town Center Assocs., 101 Or. App. 79, 789 P.2d 679, review denied, 310 Or. 393, 798 P.2d 672 (1990).

In its bankruptcy claim, CTCA seeks $56,745.11 in unpaid rent and interest from debtor. Of that amount, $19,744.28 covers rent allegedly owing through March 31, 1983, when debtor abandoned the leased space, and $34,874 covers rent allegedly owing from March 31, 1983 to October 31, 1983, when CTCA leased debtor's space to another tenant.

On August 28, 1990, Bankruptcy Judge C.E. Luckey allowed CTCA's unsecured claim for $19,744.28 unpaid rent, and disallowed the remaining $34,874. Judge Luckey denied CTCA's request to set off its claim for unpaid rent against its obligation to the trustee on the state court judgment. CTCA appeals the disallowance of its claim for $34,874 unpaid rent and the denial of setoff. The trustee cross-appeals the allowance of CTCA's claim for $19,744.28 unpaid rent.

STANDARDS

The district court reviews the bankruptcy court's findings of fact for clear error. Daniels-Head & Assocs. v.

William M. Mercer, Inc. (In re Daniels-Head & Assocs.), 819

F.2d 914, 918 (9th Cir. 1987). It reviews the bankruptcy court's conclusions of law de novo. Id.

DISCUSSION

I. CTCA's Entitlement to Rent

The bankruptcy court found that CTCA was entitled to rent only until debtor's abandonment on March 31, 1983, but not afterwards. CTCA contends that because the lease was not rescinded, debtor continued to owe rent after it abandoned the store. The trustee contends that CTCA's entire claim for unpaid rent is barred because CTCA failed to litigate the counterclaim in the state court action.

A. CTCA's Entitlement to Rent Up to March 31, 1983

The trustee argues that CTCA's claim for unpaid rent is barred by res judicata. "Res judicata" refers to two separate concepts: claim preclusion and issue preclusion. Migra v.

Warren City School Dist. Bd. of Educ., 465 U.S. 75, 77 n.1

Issue preclusion refers to the effect of a judgment in foreclosing relitigation of a matter that has been litigated and decided. This effect is also referred to as direct or collateral estoppel. Claim preclusion refers to the effect of a judgment in foreclosing litigation of a matter that never has been litigated, because of a determination that it should have advanced in an earlier suit.

Id. (citation omitted). Oregon uses the terms "claim preclusion" and "issue preclusion." North Clackamas School Dist. v. White, 305 Or. 48, 50, 750 P.2d 485, modified on other grounds, 305 Or. 468, 752 P.2d 1210 (1988).

CTCA contends that the trustee acquiesced to separate proceedings by encouraging CTCA to drop its state court counterclaim and by refusing to stipulate to relief from the automatic stay. I agree with CTCA that a party may consent to piecemeal litigation. Rennie v. Freeway Transport, 294 Or. 319, 328, 656 P.2d 919 (1982).

However, even if the trustee waived its right to assert claim preclusion, issue preclusion bars CTCA's claim. apply issue preclusion in Oregon, "[f]irst, there must exist an identity of issue between the prior action and the action in which estoppel [i.e., issue preclusion] is asserted; and second, the party against whom estoppel is sought must have had a full and fair opportunity to contest the issue decided adversely to him." State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Century Home Components, Inc., 275 Or. 97, 103, 550 P.2d 1185 (1976) (citation omitted). Although Oregon does not have a compulsory counterclaim statute, "a party can not recover in a separate action on a cause of action which he failed to plead in a prior action by way of setoff or counterclaim but which was necessarily adjudicated by the former judgment." Gwynn v. Wilhelm, 226 Or. 606, 610, 360 P.2d 312 (1961) (emphasis added).

CTCA contends that the jury verdict did not necessarily adjudicate its claim for unpaid rent because that claim is based on different facts from the trustee's claims for misrepresentation and promissory estoppel. I disagree.

The Oregon Court of Appeals applied res judicata principles to similarly conflicting claims in Shlim v.

Charapata, Inc., 100 Or. App. 52, 784 P.2d 452 (1989). There, Shlim leased property to Charapata, and Charapata subleased to CML. When Charapata defaulted on its lease with Shlim, Shlim obtained a $34,000 judgment against Charapata. Shlim served a writ of garnishment on CML to collect on the judgment against Charapata. CML owed Charapata $62,000 unpaid rent and property taxes, but CML won a $44,500 judgment against Charapata for breach of the sublease.

The trial court concluded that Shlim was entitled to the $62,000 rent CML owed Charapata, set off against $44,500 judgment Charapata owed CML for breach of the sublease. On appeal, CML contended that its judgment against Charapata necessarily resolved Charapata's claim for unpaid rent, barring Shlim from garnishing on it. The Court of Appeals disagreed. It noted that Charapata had not counterclaimed for rent and taxes in the breach of the lease action. More importantly, the court noted that the judgment CLM obtained against Charapata was "silent as to whether it adjudicates any claim for rent and unpaid taxes that would bar Charapata from later bringing a claim." Shlim, 100 Or. App. at 54-55.

Unlike the judgment in Shlim, the judgment here does explicitly adjudicate rent. The trustee sought $71,010.49 for rent and common charges, and the jury awarded $24,742.40. The jury necessarily determined the amount of rent due CTCA. That judgment bars CTCA from raising its rent claim here.

B. CTCA's Entitlement to Rent After March 31, 1983

The bankruptcy court found that claim preclusion did not bar CTCA's claim for unpaid rent after debtor abandoned its store. However, it concluded that CTCA was not entitled to that unpaid rent because "there was a breach . . . which should preclude damages for breach." 2 Tr. at 12. CTCA appeals, contending that under Oregon's election of remedies rule, debtor continued to owe rent even after abandoning the premises.

I agree with CTCA that the trustee waived its right to seek rescission of the lease. The Oregon Supreme Court has described the rule clearly:

A party who has been induced to enter into a contract by fraud, has, upon its discovery, an election of remedies. He may either affirm the contract, and sue for damages, or disaffirm it, and be reinstated in the position in which he was before it was consummated. These remedies, however, are not concurrent, but wholly inconsistent. The adoption of one is the exclusion of the other.

Scott v. Walton, 32 Or. 460, 464, 52 P. 180 (1898). However,
I will not this extend this harsh rule unnecessarily.
Gentemann v. Sunaire Sys., Inc., 63 Or. App. 654, 659, 665
P.2d 875, review denied, 295 Or. 631, 670 P.2d 1034 (1983).

9 - OPINION

Rescission is not the only way that a tenant's obligation to pay rent may be terminated.

In Kulawitz v. Pacific Woodenware & Paper Co., 25 Cal.2d 664, 155 P.2d 24 (1944), the California Supreme Court confronted a similar issue. There, the tenant leased space for a furniture store after the landlord promised the tenant that it would not allow another furniture store in the same building. However, the landlord then leased space to a competing store. The tenant stopped paying rent, surrendered the premises, and brought an action for rescission. The court held that the tenant was not entitled to rescission because he had not paid his rent to the date of the breach. However, the court held that the landlord was entitled to rent only up to the date of surrender:

A covenant not to let other premises in the lessor's property or permit their use for certain purposes during the existence of the lease with the covenantee is binding and a breach thereof entitles the lessee to terminate the lease.

In this case performance of the restrictive covenant by the lessor was essential to the beneficial enjoyment of the property by the lessee for the purposes intended. It was therefore a condition precedent to the lessee's performance, and breach thereof may be said to amount to a constructive eviction of the lessee . . . Any interference by the landlord by which the tenant is deprived of the beneficial enjoyment of the premises amounts to a constructive eviction if the tenant so elects and surrenders possession, and the tenant will not be liable for rentals for the portion of the term following his eviction.

The reasoning of Kulawitz applies here. Oregon recognizes constructive eviction. Maki v. Nikula, 224 Or. 180, 184, 355 P.2d 770 (1960). By leasing to a competing store, CTCA substantially interfered with debtor's beneficial enjoyment of its store and relieved debtor of any obligation to pay rent after it abandoned its store. Although debtor did not immediately abandon its store, its delay was not unreasonable. Cf. Maki, 234 Or. at 185-86 (lessor's erection of wall blocking lessee's alley was a constructive eviction, but lessee could not wait 26 months to abandon premises).

Because CTCA is not entitled to unpaid rent, CTCA also is not entitled to a setoff. However, I address setoff because it may be relevant on appeal.

CTCA contends that it is entitled to set off its claim for unpaid rent against the trustee's judgment for compensatory damages. The bankruptcy judge denied setoff.

The bankruptcy statutes do not affect a creditor's right to offset a mutual debt owing by such creditor to the debtor that arose before the commencement of the case under this title against a claim of such creditor against the debtor that arose before commencement of the case . . . .

11 U.S.C. § 553(a). Section 553 does not create a new federal right of setoff, but preserves existing state and federal rights of setoff. Blanton v. Prudential-Bache Securities (In re Blanton), 105 Bankr. 321, 334 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1989).

11 - OPINION

A creditor may not set off a debt that arose before the bankruptcy petition against a debt that arose afterwards.

Cooper-Jarrett, Inc. v. Central Transp., Inc., 726 F.2d 93, 96 (3rd Cir. 1984). The bankruptcy court determined that CTCA's debt to the trustee arose when the jury returned the verdict against CTCA, four years after the bankruptcy proceedings began. On appeal, CTCA contends that its debt to the trustee arose by 1982, when it deceived debtor, and that the jury verdict merely liquidated its debt.

I need not address whether the debts lacked mutuality. Even if the debts were mutual and prepetition, CTCA is not entitled to setoff if "it would be inequitable or contrary to public policy." Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Bank of Am.

Nat'l Trust & Sav. Ass'n, 701 F.2d 831, 836-37 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 935 (1983). A creditor should not benefit from inequitable behavior. See Blanton v. Prudential—

Bache Securities (In re Blanton), 105 Bankr. 321, 337-38 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1989) (collecting decisions denying setoffs that "would perpetuate wrongful acts").

CTCA contends that it seeks setoff only against the compensatory portion of judgment, not against the punitive damages. I cannot make such a fine distinction. The jury awarded compensatory damages for intentional misrepresentation, not breach of a promise. By awarding punitive damages, the jury necessarily determined that the misrepresentation was a particularly aggravated, deliberate disregard of debtor's rights. Donald H. Hartvig, Inc., 101 Or. App. at 84. CTCA is not entitled to setoff. Cf. Browner v. Rosen, 56 Bankr. 214, 218 (D. Mass. 1985) (allowing creditor to set off his claims for breach of contract against the trustee's claims for breach of contract, but not allowing creditor to set off his claims against trustee's claims for conversion, misrepresentation, and breach of fiduciary duty). CTCA's Claims for Attorney's Fees and Interest

CTCA claims attorney's fees and interest due on the CTCA did not raise this issue before the bankruptcy court. I have discretion to consider issues not presented to the bankruptcy court. Consolidated Marketing, Inc. v. Marvin Properties, Inc. (In re Marvin Properties, Inc.), 854 F.2d 1183, 1187 (9th Cir. 1988). I see no reason to consider this issue.
